Academy for Girls Planned for Fine Old Jamaica Estate

Here is the architect's sketch of the Mary Louis Academy for girls to be built for the Sisters of St. Joseph at Edgerton Boulevard and 178th St., Jamaica, under the patronage of Bishop Thomas E. Molloy. Plans for the building have been prepared by Henry V. Murphy, architect.

The site is the former Adikes estate, a landmark of Jamaica, which contains the fine old mansion, being remodeled and modernized by Mr. Murphy to provide a convent for the nuns who will form the teaching staff.

The academy will be a notable addition to the educational buildings of the Brooklyn Catholic Diocese. Three stories in height, it will be built of light brick, steel, with limestone trim and of attractive architectural design. It will contain complete facilities for high school training, including a large auditorium with a fully equipped stage; science room, art room, music room, lecture hall, library, gymnasium, cafeteria, study rooms and faculty offices. The building program provides for a spacious campus, surrounded by large shade trees, pleasant walks and tennis courts. The academy will accommodate 300 students.

The Mary Louis Academy is founded to honor the memory of the late Mother Mary Louis, General Superior for many years of the Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph. Her long and exemplary life was spent in furthering the education of Catholic children in the Diocese of Brooklyn. The new school in Jamaica will carry on the traditions established by the Sisters in Brooklyn during the past 80 years.

The academy will be a day school, giving a full four-year course that leads to the college entrance and Regents' diplomas. The Sisters have also included thorough courses in art, music and home economics, each carrying optional credit towards these diplomas. Ample provision has been made in space and equipment for corrective and outdoor physical training. A carefully chosen faculty, each member of which holds at least a bachelor's degree, will staff the school.

Tomorrow

OCT 15 1938

Mary Louis Academy for Girls at Wexford terrace and 178th street, Jamaica, will be dedicated tomorrow afternoon by the Most Rev. Thomas E. Molloy, Roman Catholic Bishop of Brooklyn.

The ceremonies will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

Monsignor John L. Belford, of Brooklyn, will be the principal speaker. Prominent members of the clergy from all parts of the diocese will attend the ceremonies.

The academy, in its second year in its new building, is named in memory of Mother Mary Louis, long connected with the educational work of the diocese.

The school is administered by the Sisters of St. Joseph.

The three-story building of variegated gray brick is built in collegiate Gothic style.

There are 16 classrooms, an art room, music rooms, science laboratories and domestic science kitchen. A well-equipped gymnasium can be converted into a dance floor by the removal of folding bleachers. The cafeteria is on the top floor. The modern auditorium seats 900.

Classes at the academy started in September, 1936. The first year students were temporarily housed in the Adikes mansion, directly opposite the Monastery of the Immaculate Conception.

The academy, a day school, gives a four-year course that leads to college entrance and Regents diplomas.

The new Mary Louis Academy for girls, named to perpetuate the memory of Mother Mary Louis, for many years connected with educational work in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, was dedicated yesterday by Bishop Thomas E. Molloy, with services at the school, Wexford Terrace and 178th St., Jamaica Estates.

The recently completed building is 300 feet long, three stories, of variegated gray brick in Gothic style. It is modernly equipped with 16 classrooms, art room, music rooms, laboratories, library, gymnasium and cafeteria.

About 700 persons, gathered in the auditorium, heard Bishop Molloy express wonderment at the docility of European parents in relinquishing parental authority in the education of their children so that "imperialistic designs" might prepare them as "cannon fodder."

Speaking on the subject of Catholic Christian education, which previously had been discussed by the Rev. John L. Belford of Brooklyn, Bishop Molloy emphasized the need for such a program by saying that it must be instituted despite the availability of other facilities.

"We find no fault with public education," the Bishop declared, "but we, as Catholics, to fulfill our duty to God, must adopt a program of Catholic Christian education for our children."

Attending the Bishop were the Msgrs. Robinson, McClancy, Clarke, Hickey, Riley, Yorke and Vigar General Hoar.
